MORRIS PARK HORSES

Kohinoor Won the Van Nest, but Officials Placed Buckley A. Winner—Jockey Hildebrand Rides Four Winners.

The most outrageous misplacing of horses that has ever occurred at a race track happened at Westchester this afternoon. The race in question was the Van Nest Stakes, a selling stake at six and a half furlongs. Kohinoor was the favorite. He jumped away in front but was very rank and kept bearing out the entire race. Hildebrand was whipping Kohinoor over the head to keep him in.

When they swung into the stretch Kohinoor was half a dozen lengths in front of Champion, who was several lengths in front of the bunch headed by Buckley A. In the run home Kohinoor bore out to the outside and was stopping at the end, but he won unquestionably by a length from Champion, who beat Buckley A. a head.

There was a short delay in putting up the number. No. 1, Buckley A.'s number, was placed. There was a howl from the crowd and the man at the number board hesitated, looked over at the judges and then took down No. 1 and hoisted Kohinoor's number.

Buckley A.'s Number Up Again.

There was a prolonged "Ah!" from the crowd, but it was changed instantly when Buckley A.'s number was again hoisted. Kohinoor was placed second and Rob Roy third. Champion, who was unquestionably second, was ignored altogether and not placed in the money.

The crowd hooted and hissed, but there was no change in the placing. There is such a thing as mistaking colors, but when a horse wins by such a margin as Kohinoor there is no room for mistake.

Outside of this decision there was little to report. The race was a sudden coming to life of Hildebrand, who had a very poor race, while the three times champions played behind a three-having speed, curves, et al. to throw away.

Brooklyn's best chance came in the fifth inning, when with a run going over the plate Clarke made a superb catch.

Wrapped in Rags, the Girl Who Was Believed to Have Been Kidnapped Was in the Chimney Next Door to Her Home at No. 1839 Third Avenue.

Many Clues Which the Police Had Followed Seemed to Point to Murder—Mass-Meeting Had Been Called for To-Night to Aid in Search for the Child.

The body of Josephine McCahill who was supposed to have been kidnapped was found at seven o'clock this evening. It had been wrapped in rags and placed in a chimney of a house next door to the home of the child, No. 1839 Third Avenue.

This discovery was so surprising that the detectives were dazed by it. For days they had been working on clues that seemed to point to the murder of the child, and a mass meeting had been planned for to-night to devise means for a further search.

The little body was discovered at 7 o'clock this evening, but it was three quarters of an hour later that news of it was given out at Police Headquarters.

The detectives were led to search the house where the body was found by the fact that an odor was detected by the inmates. They grappled with hooks in the chimney and at last the child's body was brought out.

The girl had been missing for ten days.

KID M'COY WINDS UP HIS FIGHT TRAINING TO-DAY

"Kid" McCoy finished his training to-day at White Plains for his six-round bout with "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien, which will be fought at the Second Regiment Armory in Philadelphia Saturday night.

"I was never in better shape in my life," said the Kid after his work was over, and you can make it as strong as you like. I will win the fight before the sixth round is over. That's my honest opinion."

McCoy began his last day's training at 7 o'clock this morning. He took an eight-mile run on the road and after being rubbed down by his trainer, Harry Foley, the California middleweight leaped on the scales to see the effect of the run.

The bar slithered at 157 pounds and finally went down.

This pleased the Kid, showing that he was under the middleweight limit, at which he will weigh in.

Some time ago there was some doubt about McCoy's ability to make the middleweight limit; now this has been settled.

McCoy will remain at his quarters in
